over the past two decades existing documentation of women in the agricultural sector has surveyed topics such as agricultural restructuring and land reform international trade agreements and food trade land ownership and rural development and rural feminisms many studies have focused on either the high income countries of the global north or the low income countries of the global south this separation suggests that the north has little to learn from the south or that there is little shared commonality across the global dividing line fletcher and kubik cross this political economic and ideological division by drawing together authors from 5 continents they discuss the situation for women in agriculture in 13 countries worldwide with two chapters that cover international contexts the authors blur the boundaries between academic and organizational authors and their contributors include university based researchers gender experts development consultants and staff of agricultural research centers and international organizations i e oxfam the united nations world food program the common thread connecting these diverse authors is an emphasis on practical and concrete solutions to address the challenges such as lack of access to resources and infrastructure lack of household decision making power and gender biases in policymaking and leadership still faced by women in agriculture around the world ongoing issues in climate change will exacerbate many of these issues and several chapters also address environment and sustainability this book is of great interest to readers in the areas of gender studies agriculture policy studies environmental studies development and international studies despite much learning and research over many decades large ict software projects have continued to experience poor outcomes or fallen short of original expectations some spectacularly so this is the case in the australian and new zealand public sectors even though these projects operate within historically developed institutional frameworks that provide the rules guidelines and controls and aim to consistently improve outcomes something is amiss in adapting for inertia grant douglas questions the effectiveness of these institutional frameworks in governing large ict software projects in the australian and new zealand public sectors he also gauges the perspectives of a large number of actors in projects in both sectors and examines two case studies in detail the main narrative to emerge is that the institutional frameworks are in a state of inertia they are failing to adapt owing to various institutional factors all of which have public policy implications sadly douglas finds this inertia is likely to continue if there is difficulty in changing the capacity to govern he proposes policymakers should look to change the nature of what is to be governed
